The wholesale price of beef in Chicago has advanced about 33 per cent

within the past month. Talks with several local meat dealers indicate that there will be no decrease in price prior to July 1, and before that time the tendency may possibly be towards a still larger increase. The cause of the advance is said to be the scarcity, not only of good fat cattle, but a general

scarcity of cattle of all grades and the advance in the price of corn.

Orders were issued for the withdrawal of the troops from Camp Verde

on April 24th, when the reservation

was to have been turned over to an agent of the Interior Department.

The Anaconda Copper Mines.

Interviewed in reference to the reported sale of these mines in England, for $27,000,000, Mr. Haggin said: "I haven't time to correct all the stories the newspapers print about me," "but I'll say that there's not a word of truth in this one. I haven't sold the Anaconda mines. I own them yet, and am not going to sell. I have had no dealings with the Rothschilds." A Butte, Montana dispatch states that there is no one who has authority to speak regarding the reported sale of the Anaconda mine. It is, however, understood here that the published report is merely the consummation of a deal that has been pending two years; that only the Rothschilds and others are taking a certain amount of stock in the Anaconda; that in no way will the deal interfere with the present management; that Haggin and Daily and their associates still hold and will continue to hold a controlling interest. The continued shutdown of the concern is a matter of great speculation and anxiety, as great interests to the community are involved.

Effectiveness of Torpedoes.

Advises received from Chile state that during the battle at Caldera five torpedoes were discharged at the Chilean insurgents' war vessels, sinking the monitor Huascar, as well as the Blanco Encalada. The dispatch adds that President Balmaceda's fleet, after administering this severe lesson to the insurgents, returned to Valparaiso without having sustained any damage. Commander R. B. Bradford, United States navy, probably the most accomplished expert on torpedoes and torpedo warfare in the United States, said regarding the sinking of the Chilean insurgents' flagship: "The destruction of the Encalada by a torpedo in Caldera Bay is an event of the highest significance in the annals of naval warfare. The Encalada was the best vessel in the Chilean navy, and had done great service. As a means of harbor defense I am satisfied that the torpedo, and particularly the Whitehead torpedo, is greatly underestimated. For the protection of harbors that can be closed by a range of 1000 yards the Whitehead is a perfect weapon of attack or defence."

Commissioner Carter of the General Land Office has issued instructions to registers and receivers of the land office in regard to the desert land entry.

He says the final proof must be made on all desert land entries under the act of March 3, 1887, within three years, and when sought to be perfected under the act of March 1891, within four years from the date of entry. Publication of notice of intention to make final proof must be made on all cases of entries instituted after August, 1877.

It is announced from Rome that the Italian government will have to levy additional taxes to meet the rapidly increasing deficit or reduce the army to a standard that would remove Italy from efficient membership in the triple alliance. Taxes are already very heavy, but there is no doubt that they will be increased as Italy is in a position where she must send good money after bad in order to maintain her pride.

The wholesale price of beef in Chicago has advanced about 33 per cent within the past month. Talks with several local meat dealers indicate that there will be no decrease in price prior to July 1, and before that time the tendency may possibly be towards a still larger increase. The cause of the advance is said to be the scarcity, not only of good fat cattle, but a general scarcity of cattle of all grades and the advance in the price of corn.

The Downfall of "Old Hutch."

The failure and sudden disappearance of "Old Hutch," the noted speculator of Chicago, has caused a good deal of surprise. A special dispatch to the Globe Democrat says: Hutchison has been the largest speculator that ever lived, but, like all others who play the game too long, his star has gone down. For the past two years he has been on the down grade. Being a man of iron constitution and of wonderful brain power he neglected his health, and by excessive dissipation has broken down physically and mentally and financially, and is now only a shadow of his former self. At one time he had over $5,000,000. Within the past two years his losses aggregate over $2,000,000 and in the last three months over $300,000 in excess of his winnings, which have at times been heavy. He made a settlement with his family about the first of the year, and then had $750,000. Now he is regarded as financially embarrassed. His liabilities are large, but his assets sufficient to pay in full. His books were closed last night, with about 2,500,000 bushels grain a moderate quantity of provisions. Many of his trades show profits which are regarded as sufficient to pay all loss. Most of his trades were closed out by his brokers on the advice of his sons. His big loss has been in corn, he having 2,500,000 bushels through his own house and with brokers. Most of it shows a loss of 5c, and some more. It was all closed out to-day. He backed against Leopold Bloom, who was heavily short, but the weather and big receipts made the market too weak, and the last named operator has come out in the past three days a big winner. Brokers who have handled Hutchison's business say they will lose nothing by the closing out of his trades.

Benj. P. Hutchison was born in Massachusetts and is 63 years old. His first venture in the commercial line was as a coal-broker in Lynn, Mass. After building up a fair business he failed in 1872. He came West and settled in Milwaukee, and was known for years by the old farmers as the "cheated" Lynn shoe-maker. His brother was then a large commission man in Milwaukee and helped Ben, who in 1885, came to Chicago and entered the grain and provision trade here, where he has since remained. He had one partner after another until it seemed that the old man was or had been mixed up with almost everybody in some form of partnership. At one time as a pork packer he was second only to J. D. Armour. "Hutch's" forte, however, seemed to be commissions, and he could see through these with wonderful accuracy. He was real estate dealer, and always apparently with the same remarkable success. Whatever he undertook he seemed to have the genius or faculty to carry through, and he did. Mr. Hutchison's interest in pork packing ceased long ago. For the last few or six years he had devoted his attention exclusively to the grain trade. He was worth millions, and speculated from pure love of excitement it furnished him. Though he boasted that he never ran a corner, some of his big deals looked suspiciously like squeezes of that sort. In one of these, known as the "Hutchinson deal," he made about $3,000,000. Although very close in some respects, there have been many times when he had not bought and supported the market, a panic would have resulted. There are many firms on the board to-day who have indirectly been helped because they were so embarrassed that their failure would cripple others. His faults were numerous, but he is not without many good qualities. His family relations have not been pleasant, due to his eccentricities.

Colonel Masten says he will have the road in Phoenix seven days after it reached Tempe, which will be in a few days. A temporary structure will be built across Salt River in order to save time.

Marquis di Rudini (rushing down panic-stricken in his nightclothes)—What was the cause of that terrible shock a few moments ago?

Attendant—A messenger says a powder magazine just outside the city has blown up.

Marquis di Rudini—Thank Heaven! I thought it was another letter from Blaine—Chicago Tribune.
